

20 Minutes to the Best Management Team Ever

You only have 20 minutes a day to work with your management team, how do you inspire and train them to be the best?

Synopsis

What makes the best companies the best? Luck? Right time? Right place? Or is there more to it? The key to sustainable profit and results is a management team you can depend on freeing you to spend more time on strategic initiatives and business improvement. Imagine a company not constrained by your personal capacity. But how?

Great companies have talented leaders that create highly effective leadership teams. They have figured out how to get the very best out of their people. These leaders know that one of their most important priorities is to make it happen.

When you can be comfortable relying on your leadership team to take on more responsibility for the day-to-day operations of your business, possibilities begin to multiply. Suddenly, more time can be spent introducing a new service line; meeting with important prospects and clients; even taking that 3-week vacation you've always dreamed of – without your blackberry.

There is a better way and it starts with 20 minutes a day. This one-hour seminar is for presidents and business owners who know the potential to better use their management team is there. The session will provide proven strategies to carve out more time for working on the business and less time in it.

You're good at what you do – maybe even great. Yet you know you can get better results. If you have ever said:

- If I've told them once, I've told them a thousand times...
- The only way to get something done right is to do it myself...
- Why doesn't anyone else do what's needed to make this business thrive?

Then this seminar is for you.

"This process is transforming our senior staff from a group of engineers to a team of leaders and managers working towards a common goal...We have developed the tools to incorporate accountability and transparency for projects, individuals, departments and the overall company – all connected to our big picture goals."

- Harry Angus, President,

H. H. Angus & Associates Ltd., Consulting Engineers

About Bellrock

We help business owners and leaders get the results they deserve. Bellrock is a Vancouver-based boutique management consulting firm.

But different.

We believe that smart, hardworking business leaders deserve to be profitable and less stressed but don't always have the right tools to get there on their own. We fill the gaps for you and your management team – an MBA in a box, customized to your company – whether the focus needs to be strategy, leadership, sales, or operations. We've got the tools and we show you how to use them to get results.
